The project team will provide updates on proposed locations of construction activities and new structures, replacement of the City of Seattle's combined sewer overflow (CSO) outfall, and restoration of affected areas. The team will also present next steps in the project and upcoming opportunities for public participation.

The goal of the public meeting is to provide the community and project stakeholders with an opportunity to give timely input on early design details and learn about project progress and milestones. Information gained from the community will help inform future project decisions.
